FOREWORD

Great decisions are made possible through the availability of precise and meaningful statistics. With this in mind, the National Census and Statistics Office publishes Special Report No. 3 which is one of the series of publications designed to give a most up-to-date and comprehensive statistical information on the socio-economic aspects of the country. This report focuses mainly on population, land area, density and percent change covering censal years 1970, 1975 and 1980, by region, province, municipality/municipal districts and city. It attempts to provide end-users with statistical information that could prove useful in their planning activities, for those in the private sector, in mapping out economic development programs, for those in the government; and in their research work and analytical studies, for private individuals.

POPULATION, LAND AREA AND DENSITY OF THE PHILIPPINES, AND PERCENT CHANGE IN THREE CENSAL YEARS: 1970, 1975, 1980

INTRODUCTION

The 1980 census saw the phenomenal growth of the country's population. From 36.7 million in 1970, it grew to 48.1 million in 1980, an 11.4 million increase or 31.1 percent in a ten-year span. And with a land area of 300,000 square kilometers, each square kilometer would be peopled by 160.3 persons if the population were evenly distributed.

A study on the growth and change in the distribution of population is of utmost importance to nation — builders for it greatly affects the formulation of the nation's social and economic policies. The tables presented here show the distribution and redistribution of the population; by region and province, by province, municipality and municipal districts, and by city, the comparative changes in land area and density of city, municipality and province between 1975 and 1980; and percent changes in three censal years. The population density, expressed in terms of the average number of people per square kilometer, is the index of distribution. Population densities for these three censal years were based on the latest estimated land area of the Philippines.

As of May 1, 1980, there are 73 provinces, 60 cities, 1,484 municipalities and 21 municipal districts. A comparative study of the various provinces and municipalities comprising the country reveals that there were 7 provinces, 52 municipalities and a city created and 2 municipalities dissolved during the intercensal periods. As a result of the tremendous increase in the population of Manila and its environs, and in the wake of major social, economic and political implications attendant to a large, highly urbanized area, an integrated community, composed of 4 cities and 13 municipalities, collectively known as Metropolitan Manila, was created under Presidential Decree No. 824. On the other hand, Cotabato, with its vast land area, was divided into three distinct provinces, namely: Maguindanao, North Cotabato and Sultan Kudarat.

REGIONAL DISTRIBUTION

National Capital Region, an integrated community, composed of 4 cities, 13 municipalities holds the distinction of having the heaviest concentration of population for the three censal years in review. It has a population density 58.1 times higher than the Philippines. On the average, 9,317.4 persons populate each square kilometer, as compared to 160.3 for the whole country.

Although, it is the smallest of the thirteen regions in terms of areal size, occupying a land area of 636 square kilometers which represents 0.2 percent of the country's total, its population has been growing at a much higher rate than its territories could well afford to contain. From 1970 to 1980, it experienced a tremendous increase in population. During this period, the population of the Philippines increased by 31.1 percent, whereas that of the NCR increased by 49.4 percent. While the population of the country grew annually at the rate of 2.75 percent, that of the NCR grew at the rate of 4.1 percent, taking the number one lead since 1970.

The other five most densely populated regions in 1980 are: Region III (Central Luzon), 263.4; Region VII (Central Visayas), 253.3; Region VI (Western Visayas), 223.8; Region V (Bicol), 197.2; Region I (Ilocos), 164.2. These regions have maintained their ranks within a decade. In contrast, Region II (Cagayan Valley) and Region X (Northern Mindanao), peopled by 60.9 and 97.4 persons per square kilometer, in that order recorded low population densities, as always since 1970.

The succeeding tables show the comparative change in density and rank of thirteen regions during the census years 1970, 1975 and 1980.

PROVINCIAL DISTRIBUTION

Cavite, peopled by 404.0 persons per square kilometer in 1970, 488.0 in 1975 and 599.0 in 1980, ranks first among provinces, a position previously occupied by the city of Manila, considered a province in 1970. Laguna comes in second with 553.0. Pampanga positions itself in the third slot, dislodging Laguna.

Palawan, on the other hand, has the lowest population density although it covers a land area of 14,897.5 square kilometer, the biggest land area of the 73 provinces. In short, each square kilometer is sparsely populated by 25.0, despite an increase of 135,147 persons since 1970.

Ranked according to the number of persons per square kilometer, the provinces stand as follows:

CITY DISTRIBUTION

Of the 60 cities of the Philippines, Manila, as expected, shows the heaviest concentration of population. The number of persons per square kilometers increased by 3,872.8 persons during the first half of the decade (1970-1975) and by 3,952.2 persons this latter half (1975-1980). The city has a population density of 42,751.4 persons per square kilometer for 1980, while 38,619.2 in 1975 and 34,746.4 in 1970. Pasay City ranks second, as always, with a density of 20,702.9 which is less than half the density of Manila. For the third slot, Mandaua City, formerly 4th and 5th in rank in 1970 and 1975, was able to make it with a density of 9,452.1. Caloocan City, having a density of 8,383.8, and Cavite with 7,429.3 come in fourth and fifth, respectively. Only three cities are way below the average density for the entire country (160.3). These are: Bais (155.6), Calbayog (118.2), and Puerto Princesa City (28.6).

Table 3A summarizes the rank and the corresponding population density of the 60 cities for censal years, 1970-1980.
